Number of Hurdles Still Seen

Smith, 3 Black Leaders Sign Accordon End of White Rule

By David B. Ottaway

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, March (WP) .- Prime Minister Ian Smith today signed a historic agreement with three moderate ack leaders that will end nearly 90 years of all-white rule in this breaksway former British colony and pave the way for the establishment of a fully black-run government at the end of this

The complicated six-page accord, reached after three months of hard negotiation, provides for Mr. Smith to remain as Prime Minister while creating a new multiracial interim government led by a four-member executive council, including the three black leaders. Decisions are to be made by consensus, assuring both sides of a blocking power.

In addition, there is to be a ministerial council that will have an equal number of black and white ministers.

. The agreement effectively spells the end of white rule in Rhodesia hnt insures that the 268,000 whites will continue to play a dominant role in both the interim government and the writing of a new constitution for Zimbabwe, the name this country will undoubtedly take once the 6.7 million blacks take power on Dec. 31. Mr. Smith said the exact date for the transitional government to begin functioning would be decided soon by the four leaders jointly, as would the question of whether a nationwide referendum of both the black and white populations will be beld to approve the agreement.

Fourth Attempt

The accord came after three abortive attempts by Mr Smith in the last four years to negotiate an internal settlement directly with Rhodesia's black nationalist leaders. Two of these attempts involved two of the blacks involved in the present negotiations, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the United African National Council, and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, head of his own African National Council. However, the agreement reachec here today still faces a numbe of big hurdles, and the whole plan as deviced by the four lead-ers could be upset by any number of future events, such as its rejection by the present whitedominated Parliament or its failure to gain the broad backing of the African population. In addition, there is the steadily worsening guerrilla war being waged by Patriotic Front, which has rejected the entire plan as "the biggest sellout in African history" and vowed to fight on to total military victory.

Thus, probably the most difficult task immediately facing the new interim government will be trying to arrange a cease-fire and convince the 15,000 to 20,000 guerrillas to accept its anthority.

Black Support Claimed While the three black leaders predicted today that "the overwl elming majority" of the goerrillas would back their internal settlement package, there remainen considerable doubt among outside observers here that this was tion at a press conference after ing to the agreement, include the signing ceremony that any-body who wishes to come back and work peacefully to produce a new constitution for Rhodesia is entitled to do so, provided they forgo terrorism.

But he said the interim government would go on fighting if the Pririodic Front did. "Remember, they will be fighting against a najority government in this country," he remarked. "I just don't believe that they will rece've the support of Rhodesians."

The other main functions of the transitional government, accordconsideration of the release of political detainees, the removal of racial discrimination laws, the organization of "free and democatic elections' and the drafting of a new constitution.

The agreement also embodies "certain fundamental principles" for a constitution agreed upon by the four leaders 18 days ago. These include majority rule based on universal adult suffrage, a 100member parliament with 28 seats reserved for the whites, and various safeguards for the white mijudiciary and a justiciable bill of The brief sigoing ceremony was held in a packed side room of the red brick mansion where the negotiations have been taking place. It formerly was the residence of the governor of Southern Rhodesia, the name of the country before the whites declared unilateral independence from Britaln in November, 1965.

The agreement was signed on the black side by Bishop Muzo rewa, Mr. Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, who leads the Zimbahwe United People's Organization, a grouping of tra-ditional tribal elements.

After the ceremony, Chief Chirau told a crowd of reporters gathered on the mansion front lawn that "today we have got what the people of this country have wanted for many years." Bishop Muzorewa, who left almost immediately for a meeting in London with British officials, made an impassioned nlea for Western recognition of the unterim government, particularly by Britain.

Chinese Arms Aid Cambodia in Border War

By George McArthur

BANGKOK, March 3.-The Cambodian border army fighting Vietnam has been significantly strengthened by at least a shipload of arms from China, including anti-tank rockets, heavy mines and big guns.

The secret arms shipment has helped the guerrilla-style Cam-bodian forces in their bid to counter Vietnamese superiority in numbers and such weapons as tanks. The shipment also showed ihai China intends io support effectively its ally. Authoritative sources said that the border fighting has currently subsided to hit-and-run forays but that the Cambodians continue mall-unit attacks.

Chinese Shipments

The Chinese have been shipping small arms and light ammunition through Sihanoukville for almost three years. This is the first shipment known to include new types of military bardware, possibly 130-mm guns with a range of 17 miles. The Cambodia is the aggressor in Vietnamese claim that such guns have been shelling the provincial capital of Tay Ninh City. More important, however, has been the arrival of anti-tank rockets which would seriously imperil any renewed thrust by Vietnamese tanks into Cambodia. The Chinese arms shipment contained 57-mm, 75-mm and 82mm recoilless rifles—all of which fire rockets capable of stopping the Soviet tanks used by Vietnam. All are also light weapons suited to Cambodia's guerrilla-style army In addition, the Chinese sent quantities of carriagemounted 120-mm morters, a mobile weapon with a heavy shell that would be devastating against truck convoys.

Significant Punch While these weapons do not match the sophistication of the Vietnamese inventory, they add significant punch to the small Cambodian units which proved tough in wearing down the Vietnamese invasion in December. You can look for a different kind of situation if the Vietnamese decide to go in again," said a military analyst.

The seeming inability of Vietnam's new army to meet these tactics, plus Cambodia'a unbending refusal to negotiate, is infurlating the authorities in Hanoi. It is generally believed that the Vietnamese are not planning another military invasion, although they were probably considering such action before China's support for Cambodia was forcefully expressed. In the long run, however, the Vietnamese may feel backed into a corner with no alternative.

Britain Readies Showdown With U.S. in Air-Fare Dispute

By Dan Ehrlich

LONDON, March 3 (IHT).-Britain has been gathering allies among its European neighbors for a showdown with the United States on Monday in a new round of the North Atlantic air-fare

Patrick Shovelton, Britain's deputy secretary for civil aviation, and his nation's top air-fare ne-gotiator, will go to Washington for talks on the situation.

Mr. Shovelton's concern anpeared to be with the request by 10 major U.S. airlines for cheap fares from London to several U.S. cities. He considers the Braniff International Airways problem a separate matter.

European airlings are worried about the saturation of the market with chean fares by U.S. airlines. They fear some European carriers will be driven out of "American carriers have the asset of flying two-thirds of the passengers leaving America for Europe. Americans tend to fly on their own national airlines so they can absorb more chesp flights. We can't." Mr. Shovelton said.

"Our two-month figures on the London-to-New York run after the start of Skytrain shows an increase of 15 per cent in the traffic, but only a 3-per-cent increase in revenue." Meanwhile, Mr. Laker is not happy about all these new cheap fare applications, but he says, he is not worried." Pan Am doesn't have much of a chance of getting its plan through," he said "To date we have sold 81,000 tickets at gross revenue of more than $10 million," he said of the

The prospect of a deeper Zambian involvement in the Rhodisian war arises from the presence here of a fast-growing guerrilla army owing allegiance to Joshua Nkomo, co-leader of the Patriotic Front, the Rhodesian nationalist group that took no part in the Salisbury talks. #### France to Defy EEC Rise in Produce Rates

PARIS March 3 (UPI) -France will defy a European Economic Community ruling raising monetary compensatory amounts (MCAs) to 23 per cent and will apply the present rate of 21.5 per cent when the ruling comes into effect Monday, an Agriculture Ministry spokesman said today.

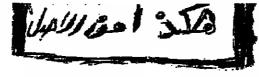

The spokesman said that the decision applies to both exports and imports. French customs services have been instructed to bar entry of foreign produce subsidized at the nev rate, the spokesman said MCAs are a means by which the nine EEC member states subsidize their agricultural produce. The French decision will be discussed at a meeting of agriculture ministers in Brussels on Monday, the spokesman said.

France, claiming that higher MCAs would make its producers less competitive, had requested that introduction of the higher level be postponed at least until after National Assembly elections March 12-19. French anthorities believe that the franc's fall in value is due to speculation and uccertainty over the elections.

Judge Threatens Jail If FBI Refuses to Name Informants

By Nicholas M. Horrock

WASHINGTON, March 3 (NYT).-A U.S. District Court judge in New York has warned the Justice Department that he would consider imprisoning FBI officials or others who defied a court order to disclose the names of informants, according to transcripts released yesterday.

Judge Thomas Griesa told lawvers recresenting the Justice Department in a $27-million Socialist Workers party lawsuit that he would reject government attempts to forfest the case rather than disclose the names. "I want to give you advance notice that I will seriously consider contempt or imprisonment of defiant officials," he said.

The judge was responding to a government lawyer's suggestion that the PBI and the Justice Department might defy court orders as high as the Supreme Court and forfeit all or parts of the lawsuit in order to avoid disclosing the names of informants without their consent.

Second Time in Month This is the second time in a month that government lawyers have been in confrontation with a federal court over disclosure of FBI records.

Earlier last month, a federal judge in Chicago held two lawyers for the FBI in contempt of court for refusing to turn over records of certain organizations that became the target of FBI infiltra-tion and surveillance. The contempt charge was later dropped when the lawyers complied with aspects of the order.

Attorney General Griffin Bell issued a statement yesterday affirming "that it is the policy of this Department of Justice to obey court orders." He noted that although he was not familiar with the details of this case, he had been told no order had yet

Judge Grisesa also strongly criticized the government for filing "incomplete and misleading" answers under oath to questinners in the case. He also said that when he reviewed the files of informants working in the Socialist Workers party he found that

The lawyer called it a "potential constitutional crisis.

Nearly five years ago, the Socialist Workers party filed a damage suit to prevent the FBI from burglarizing, wiretapping, infiltrating, tampering with the mail of, or harrassing, the party. In 1976. Edward Levi, then attorney general, ruled that the party could no longer be the target for counterintelligence operation

The sirting change, although it occurred near the time of the Chrysler contribution, was not a factor in the company's donation, 2 Chrysler official said.

Ford, GM Committees

The new open Ford and GM PACs are younger than Chrysler's and have yet to operate this year. GM, for example, reported last month that it collected $57,286 last year from its first in-house stilicitation and did not make any contributions. GM expects about $90,000 to be raised for this year's elections.

Slow Start Under the GM system, contributions go to a Detroit bank so that employees do not show their costes whether they have contributed. The money can be earmarked for a specific candidate or party, or it can go into a company pool of funds.

Distribution is governed by a GM selection committee which, as with Chrysler, looks at "congressmen with facilities," a GM spokesman said.

The Ford PAC got off to such a slow start last year that the company hired consultants to perk at up. They did so with the help of a documentary movie that illustrated the issues which affect the auto industry.

Jay Smith formerly with House Minority Leader John Rhodes. R-Ariz, was partner in the consultant firm that worked for Ford.

When Ford employees saw "how the auto industry was perceived." Mr. Smith said, many were more than eager to contribute.

U.S. Indictments Expected Against Port Chiefs

By Anthony Marro

WASHINGTON, March 3 (NYT) .- After more than two years of investigation of corruption in Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports, federal prosecutors in Mami plan to seek about two dozen indiciments charging a cross section of labor union and shipping industry officials with corruption, according to governmetet 30terces.

The indictments, which are being drafted by prosecutors and are expected to be submitted to a federal grand july for approval in about a month, will mark the end of a phase of an investigation that could have a major impact on the leadership of the International Longshoremen's Asacciation, which represents dock workers in East Coast and Gulf Coast ports.

The investigation also is active in New York, where FBI agents have made use of court-approved electronic surveillance and have engaged in undercover work on Ts. Because of the scope of the investigation, however, Justice Department and Treasury Department sources say that large numbers of indictments are not expected there for another four to six months, An indictment must be approved by a grand jury before it has effect. The Goal

"The goal isn't just to get a couple of convictions" of ILA officials, said one Justice Deiment official who did not want to be quoted by name. The goal is to clean up the unam and to change the way business is done on the docks." According to a Treasury Department memorandum a major focus of the investigation is "the extortive activities of the highest-ranking II.A officials in the country.

A number of government offi-cials have toki The New York Times that Thomas Glesson, 76. the fermer cargo checker who now heads the II.A, is not a target of the investigation. But they confirmed privately that many of the vice-presidents under Mr. Gleason are targets.

It could not be issued which of the union's officials would be named in the indictments being drafted, but among those said to be targets of the investigation are Anthony Scotto, the head of an H.A. local in Brooklyn; George Barone and William Boyle, both union officials in Miami, and Robert Bateman the head of the union's local in Charleston, S.C.

Large-Scale Corruption

The investigators say that they have discovered what they describe as evidence of barge-scale corruption in the nation's port cities, involving not only the labor unions but also shippers, carriers and service industries. They add that they have uncovered information on crimes that include a systematic milk-ing of union pension and welfare funds, widespread double-billing of expense statements by ILA officials, heavy-handed and sophisticated schemes to extort money from businessmen and the threat of labor disruption to steer business to concerns with ties to ILA leaders.

At least 17 U.S. attorneys' offices have been involved in the investigation, helping to build cases that show patterns of ex-tortion, bribery, theft, fraud, tax evaston, labor racksteering and violations of the Bank Secrecy

The result of these activities, federal officials say, has been an added cost of billions of dollars to consumers. "What makes this so devastating is that there's only one real victim, the consumer," said James Adams, the deputy associate FBI director for criminal investigations. "Every-one else can get out of what he has to lose by passing" the cost "along to the consumer."

Only a Hint

The investigation already has had an effect on the union, and federal agents say that this is only a hint of what is to come In the last year, nearly a dozen

Mr. Scotto, the Brooklyn longshore leader who is one of the most powerful figures on the East Coast piers, said yesterday: "I have nothing to hide. I am certein that the investigators will find that to be true, as they reach the conclusion of yet another probe." .

Mr. Bateman, who is president of an ILA local in Charleston, said that, not only had he done nothing to warrant an investigation, he felt he was being harassed by federal agents.

Future Indistments Future indictments are expected to concentrate more heavily on the shippers, and on the service

LISBON, March 3 (UPI).-White mercenaries responding to a recruitment drive in Europe have returned to Angola to join pro-Western guerrillas fighting the Soviet and Cuban-backed regime, guerrilla sources have said.

The sources said that 200 mercenaries, including British, French and Belgian Army veterans, re-cruited by the Zaire-based Angola National Liberation Front (PNLA), had arrived in northern Angola in the last two weeks. # Carter's New 'Linkagemanship' patronage of Zbigniew Brzezinski, seconded Thursday by his chief, Jimmy Carter, We refer to the doctrine that holds, in its most common variant, that if the Russians act hadly in third countries, the United States will withhold its cooperation in some other policy area in which the Russians have special interest. Endorsed by the previous administration until it became impractical to apply, this doctrine was formally repudiated at the outset by this administration. But Mr. Brzezinski and Mr. Carter, watching with growing dismay the Soviet intervention in Ethiopia and being no more able than anyone else to figure out a way to stop it, have now doubled a long way back.

The Soviet intrusion, Mr. Brzezinski says, "will inevitably complicate" both the negotiation and ratification of a new strategicarms limitation treaty. "The two are linked because of actions by the Soviets," adds Mr. Carter. "We don't initiate the linkage."

We wish the White House had let sleeping linkages die. Analytically, it's right that Moscow's Ethiopia operation nourishes hardline American sentiment and hurts SALT. But analysis, when it comes publicly from the President and his national security adviser, becomes policy, their hands-off pose notwithstanding. To remark on the connection is to endorse it, to lend some of the administration's authority to making it come

That, we submit, is unnecessary, even fool-

"Linkage" is back, kind of, under the igh. The Kremlin's Ethlopian power play presents problems to Washington, but those problems are properly defined and necessarily worked out in terms of policy in Africa. The situation in Ethiopia has deterlorated so far, from the American viewpoint, that there may be no way to restore What can be done is to limit the damage: To see to it that Somalia's integrity is protected, to find the slow path back toward normal relations with Ethiopia and to try to avoid "another Ethiopia" in Rhodesia. To hitch SALT to Ethiopia is to burden SALT without helping in Ethlopia. How, later, will the administration back off?

> Of course, the administration may he raising the Ethiopia issue to distract the Russians, and perhaps the American public, from its failure so far to negotiate an armscontrol treaty. But frankly, we doubt it. We don't think the President and Mr. Brzezinski are being devious. We think they're mixed up as to their purposes. Instead of supplying grist to the anti-SALT mill, they should be protecting the abiding American interest in SALT from the fallout of a third-county flareup in which the Russian presence, however troubling in its implications, supports a principle-territorial integrity-dear to the Unite" . ates' own heart. A good armscontrol agreement is far too important to the United States to be held hostage to tha Ethiopian dispute.

What Mrs. Gandhi Won

Hard at work on the political comeback trail, Indira Ganchi seems to be profiting handsomely from the Indian democracy that she tried so hard to suppress when she was prime minister just a year ago. That is the message from India's villages after elections held in five of that country's 22 states last weekend. The surprise is not that the Janata party, which rules in New Delhi, did so poorly in two large southern states—it was not expected to do well-but that the "regular" Congress party was crushed by the breakaway Congress-I ("I" for Indira) party, which Mrs. Gandhi heads. She now has a new base of power in a part of India which, because of its distance from New Delhi, did not feel so sharply the impact of the suspensions of civil liberties under the "emergency" she declared in 1975.

The longer-term result of Mrs. Gandhi's victory is likely to be a further splintering of Indian politics. If her followers had done poorly in Andhra Pradesh and Karnataka, ie Congress darty regulars, claim to be the official opposition at the national level might have seemed unchallengeable. Now, however, Mrs. Gandhi says that Congress-I deserves that title; and the president of the "regular" Congress party has felt it his "moral duty" to resign. The ruling Janata party itself is an amalgam of five widely disparate parties, jerry-built to contest the parilamentary elections Mrs. Gandhi suddenly called a year ago. Its titular head, Morarji Desai, the present Prime Minister, has acted. perforce, more as a chairman than as a leader, often allowing his ministerial coileagues to pull in divergent directions.

National issues apparently played little part in the state elections, but Mrs. Gandhi will now argue more loudly than ever that the Janata government has allowed India to slip into its oid undisciplined ways. She concedes that, under her regime, "overzealous officials" committed "excesses." But she will argue—as she did throughout the "emergency" - that some restrictions on liberty are the necessary price of progress in a poor country.

The danger is that events may appear to bear her out. India's economy surged remarkably during 1975-77-not, however, because of the "emergency" but as a result of exceptionally good harvests and of some intelligent decisions in previous years. By contrast, it will take several years to know whether the Janata government's policy of diverting investment-from the big showcase industrial projects of the previous two decades toward agriculture and small-scale industry—will really improve the life of the population.

Meanwhile, the election results are sure to cloud still further the current judicial investigation of Mrs. Gandhi's involvement in corruption and other breaches of law during the emergency. She has thus far refused to testify, charging that it is all a political vendetta by her opponents. Her recent electoral successes will undoubtedly amplify her assertions. But Indians and India's friends abroad-should hope that former Chief Justice Shah perseveres in his careful inquiry. Mrs. Gandhi has much to answer for. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

U.S. Warning to Russia Washington has now warned the Russians

that their African adventures are liable to have an adverse effect on the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) and on détente generally . . . The whole fabric of détente will be damaged if the Russians come to believe that they can treat it selectively . . . It is important that the Russians should now be more firmly discouraged. It is all the more important if some hawkish faction in Moscow is trying to prove a point in order to gain power. If the Russians still want detente, if they want to curb the arms race, if they want technology, and if they want Western respect for their own legitimate interests, they will have to find that they cannot have Africa too.

The Decline of the Dollar

It is a sign of the special position which America still enjoys that Washington can allow its currency to fall as far as it has done without being stampeded into the sort of crisis measures which a country like Britain or Italy would by now have been forced to take. Why, indeed, should Amerlea do anything about the dollar's fall? Until very recently, other countries were only too happy to finance the enormous U.S. government deficit. Until the British authorities had the common sense to start ploughing the reserves into early debt repayment, Brit-aln was huying enough U.S. government securities singlehandedly to cover the American deficit. Even now, as the dollar collapses, the U.S. devaluation hurts the rest of the world more than it hurts America . . . Ultimately, the best reason for the United States to make a serious effort to stop the dollar's slide is the damage it could do to the rest of the world. It is a dangerous thing to have the world's main international eurrency so unstable . . . But the most worrying aspect of the dollar's slide is tha way it threatens to sour still further relations between Washington and Bonn . . . The Germans . . . argue that the fall of the doliar makes it harder for Germany to achieve its growth target.

-From the Guardian (London).

Hopes for Uncle Sam

Thirty years ago, America saved Germany -indeed most of Western Europe - from staryation. But now the sinking dollar means the GI stationed in Germany finds his pay cheque buying less and less. It is an fronic turnsbout, particularly when you consider that America spends more on the defense of Europe than her European allies. Fortunately for all of us, the United States is still by far the world's richest and most powerful nation. We take no pleasure in Uncle Sam's temporary discomfiture, And we wish the patient a speedy recovery.

Tito: the 85-Year-Old East-West Force

By James Reston

IGALO, Yugoslavia.—Winiston Churchill once said that the main thing in politics was not whether you could start the race but whether you could stay the course. And here in this recklessly beautiful village on the moun-tain-rimmed shore of the Adriatic is Tito of Yugoslavia, the last survivor of the generation of Roosevelt, Churchill, Stalin, Mac Tse-tung, Nehru and De Ganlle, still trying at 85 to hold this diverse and pagnacious country together, and dreaming of the 21st century.

Leave politics aside, who knows what murders and massacres out of the past may trouble his sleep in the night, but he goes on, like the twisted old almond trees now flowering in the bleak valleys of the Montenegrin moutains around his house. He speaks quietly and vividly shout the struggles of his life. "I faced difficulties," he says, "as a young soldier in the service of a country [Austria-Hungary] which held my homeland (Yngoslavia) under occupation. It was not easy to go to war for someone you knew to be an enemy. During that war, I was wounded and ended up in a (Russian) prison camp."

One wonders, listening to this elemental old man, about the accidents and endurance of hie At 85, his voice is strong and his immac-ulately manicured hands are steady. He has no complaints, but, when pressed, he talks about his struggles during the last world

'Most Difficult'

found most difficult to bear," he says, "the fact that during the war we in Yugoslavia fought for almost 2 1/2 years slone, that the Allies did not recognise us, but the Cetniks, who were actually fighting against us and with the Germans, were given support for a long time by the Western Allies." Telling this story, Tito is on the edge of his chair, back again in memory in the struggle, an old man retelling the mightmares of his youth. What about his days as a prisoner in the Soviet Union? he is asked. Was this a formative period in his life?

"Of course it was," he says. "I gained much when I was a prisoner. . I used those six years extensively for acquainting myself with military science, for study in general, reading works of fic-tion." He traits off when asked what works of fiction, what suthors, what concepts he learned. There was much more of this. but now here he is, still engaged in East-West relations, the Middle East and Africa, going to Washington to talk it all over with President Carter and hoping, rather sadly, that he won't be embarrassed by demonstrations outside the Blair House, where he will live for a couple of days on Pennsylvania Avenue. He seems excited about this trip, wondering about President Carter, simost like a young man venturing on his first trip abroad. He has clearly come into the confidence of old age and feels free to speak his mind, even on the most delicate questions of world affairs.

He does not hesitate to criticize Carter for going too far on "hu-man rights." Or condemn President Sadst of Egypt for going too far without the support of the other Arab states, 'He seems supremely confident and regards himself as an elder statesman who can afford to tell the truth as he sees it, regardless of the opposition. Tito says, almost casually, that he wants to help Carter in dealing with the Russians and with the crisis in the Horn of Africa. He stranged, he says, to have David Asron of the U.S. National Security Council see the leaders of Ethiopia to try to make peace there. He has been writing to Carter and to President Brezhnev of the Soviet Union to compose their differences over "human rights" here at the Belgrade review of the Helsinki agreement.

Still a Force

The chances are that Tito's interventions on these questions won't mean much, but it is interesting that both the Russians and the Americans at the Belgrade conference feel obliged to pay attention to his argument. Despite his age, Tito is not a remote figure out of the past but still a significant force that has to be considered by both Moscow and Washington.

Tito does not publicly intervene very often in these international questions. He is very canny, Much more than is generally realised, he is in touch with Carter on tions and with Brezhnev on East-West questions. He is insisting on his role as a spokesman between East and West and between the industrial nations of the North and the so-called non-aligned nations of the South. enwhile, he is protecting his health here and assuring that he has enough strength and staff to retain a voice in the world. His new, modern house in this village is a case in point. He has come here because there are medicinal springs that will ease his rheumatism. He will go to Belgrade on his way to Washington, because it is convenient. And, in the summer, he will go to his island of Erion, where it is warmer.

In short, he is clearly determined to be a force in world affairs and this is why he is going to Washington next week. He is worried about East-West rela-tions, about the Middle East and about the fighting in the Horn of Africa, and he is anxious to discuss them with the U.S. Presi-

James Reston interviews President Tito in depth in an article that will appear in the Insights/ Sidelights section of the IHT of Monday, March 6.

France's Vote on 'La Crise'

By Emma Rothschild

NEW YORK.—France is looking, in this month's legislative elections, at one of the most suppressed of political impres

The issue is not Eurocommum, but economic infirmity. For four years, Europe has been consumed by economic troubles. These troubles have been reflected only indirectly in political life, as intermittent and transitory symptoms. Now, in France, they are for the first time the overt esion of politics.

The Issue is the economic crisis -la crise. The phrase is empipresent in political speech. By it are understood several things:

high and persisting levels of unemployment and inflation; the sense that the economic boom of the postwar epoch is over; the knowledge that the economic policies of the boom can no longer naure full employment. The daily life of the election thick with this crisis, its etiology and prospects. It is also the overwhelming issue between the government and the opposi-

Late in 1977, unemployment in France reached its highest rate in more than 20 years. Lorraine, in the northeast, shows the con-sequences. There, the crisis means a decline in the two leading industries, steel and textiles. It means that there are towns where one person in eight is unemployed, where the population is dwindling and growing older or where an Italian textile company is closing its local subsid-

Border Life

Part of Lorraine was ceded to Germany after the war of 1870-7L After World War I, it was returned to France. It was annexed again in World War II. Now, people cross the frontier to look for work in the glittering Saar, one of the industrial regions of the West German momic miracle.

These people sometimes seem invisible in a society as unequal and centralized as France's, But not in an election year. Lorraine is a redoubt of Gaullism. In last year's numicipal elections, it turned to the left. The Socialists and the Communists now have a fair chance to win a third of its seats in the new National As-

The government is obliged. more or less, to run on its record over the last, dismal five years. It seeks to show that the crisis is not really anyone's fault and not really a political issue. "I understand," President Valery Giscard d'Estaing has told voters. that certain among you may be tempted to vote against 'the crisis.'" But he suggests that such a gesture is as futile as like an epidemic, it comes to us from without." To this lofty quiescence, the opposition answers that Prance's economic troubles are indeed within the power of the electorvoting against sickness. The crisis, he says, mocks ballots: It "is

The crisis, according to Jacques Altali, the Socialists' leading economic theorist, is neither a temporery breakdown nor a sign of the imminent demise of capital-Instead, it marks a turning point in capitalist development with its origins in long-term trends (such as, in the case of steel, the displacement of people by machines and the near-saturation of certain markets, notably for automobiles)

The Socialists, now the most popular party in France, propose in the short run to create 210,000 new public jobs (amounting to one-fifth of total unemployment -or the equivalent, for the United States, of over I million jobs).

The jobs would be concentrated in the most depressed regions, such as Lorraine. The Socialists would also increase the minimum income of low-paid workers, impose temporary price controls and encourage inflation-indexed

Longer Run In the longer run, the Socialists

believe that structural reforms are required. A Socialist-led governent, Mr. Attali has said, would be preoccupled with economics. But its themes would be industrial reform (directing investment to new industrial sectors and promoting local and workers' control). reducing inequality in income distribution and decentralization. A region such as Lorraine would have greater autonomy in planning and a larger share of tax revenues. Depressed communities would receive priority in credit from newly nationalized banks. There would be more public investment, particularly in such services as local hospital care and mass transport, which provide jobs and use little energy. France's economic trouble the left suggests, do constitute a sickness. But the sickness is not President Giscard d'Estaing's "epidemic," a sort of Black Death or Hong Kong flu. Instead, it can be cured by change in the industries and regions of France itself. The principle is clear: that la crise is not inevitable; that it is a proper subject, in sum, on which to hold an election.

Emma Rothschild, a guest columnist of The New York Times, visited France last month. She is the author of "Paradise Lost: The Decline of the Auto-Industrial Age."

NEW YORK-Two reports from highlight the awful reaches of ideology and the persistent survival of the state as the enemy of all well disposed, decent, and industrious men," as H. L. Mencken hyperbolically put it. The first is a remarkable report by The New York Times' John Darnton from Addis Ababa, Thither, as we know, a group of journalists were invited only to be subjected to a kind of ironfisted paternalism that men and women suckled by the U.S. First Amendment on press freedom are quite unused to. Not even in Peking are reporters virtually locked into their hotels and required to report for duty to visit every port of call on the agenda. Even so, John Darnton managed to get around, and he transmits an elated infatuation with Marxism by the young revolutionary set in Ethiopia, whose principal occupation these days is killing

This is not considered a violation of human rights; in Ethiopia we are baptized, by total immersion, into the Orwellian mode. The right not to be taken: from your home or office and killed is not a human right. All rights, we are given to understand are economic rights, Under the imperial rule of Hatle Selassie, Ethiopia was desperately poor, and there were, therefore: no rights. In order to rectify this situation, the Ethiopian leaders explain, it becomes necessary to transform society. "How can a revolution happen. without bloodshed?" Darnton quotes a "well-dressed" young unber of the Ethiopian Revolution Information Center, "sipping a beer in the lobby of the Ghion

The question was explored formally for the benefits of the visiting journalists in something very like a semmar, at which three speakers spoke on the subject of violence, "explaining it, analyzing it, extolling it." "One might look at the whole thing from a moral point of view," one leader explained: "Why kill" people? Is a revolution just killing people? One might ask such moral questions. But the question of violence cannot be: approached from a purely abstract moral level."

Haile Selassie was overthrown in 1974. After that there was an effort of sorts made to effect land reform, nationalization and the rest of it. In the last year the revolution has gone sour." one European observer remarked. In the last year there have been no revolutionary measures, no proclamations; it's just killings and more killings." Ah, but what will the dawn When Frelimo, the anti-Portuguese guerrilla force in Mosambique, turned Marxist, it lost one of its founders, Domingo Arouca, who is now leader-in-exile of the opposition FUMO. He, too, recently spoke with Western reporters, detailing the effect that "scientific socialism" (he calls it "fascism") has had on Mozambique. There is no longer any system of public transportation; medical care has decreased to such a point that death in childbirth is as common as it was at the turn of the century. "Political change in Mozambique," he said, "is not a matter of "if" but of "when." The people are fighting against the constant demonstrations of tyranny." Although Arouca deplores apartheid, he does not doubt that .. the people of Mozambique would prefer to live in South Africa. The blacks of South Africa have the highest standard of living in 'the whole of Africa. No one of them would be willing to change his life for the one he would have Asked about Steven Biko, Arouse replied: "At least one hears about Biko's death, whereas the public executions made by Frelimo in the stadium of Quelimane are not even heard of . . . Nobody talks about the executions that take place in the former seedlings nursery of the town of Maputo, or of all those who are tortured and shot in the middle of the back." It is curious to recall that Karl Marx raged, during his lifetime, against the oppression of human beings. The typical revolution undertaken in his name is the analogue of the black mass. The young leaders of Ethiopia are said to have drunk their ideology at the fountains of Western universities where they were sent to be schooled. How much better off their countrymen would be if their leaders had spent their bloodlust in the tribal ways i

He thought the film was hopelessly bad and in order to write off its cost to him personally of $150,000 against taxes as a complete loss, he was required by haw to destroy it. OONA CHAPLIN.

In his article on the Soviet economy (IRT, Feb. 1), Victor Zorza asserts that to reach a growth of 32 per cent in a period of five years, after yearly growth figures of 4.8, 5.7 and 4.5 per cent. in the last two years a growth of 8.5 per cent per year would be necessary. The assumption that the percentage figures should be added-4.8 plus 5.7 plus 4.5 plus 8.5 plus 8.5 = 32.0-is obviously false. A growth of 5.8 per cent per year in the last two years would bring the overall growth to 32 per cent_1.048 x 1.057 x 1.045 x 1.068 × 1.068 = 1.32.

Works on the periphery of the once fashioneble style go down, too.

That is the situation of the t market, as mes emhesized by Thesday's sale conducted by Antoine Ader at the Peleis d'Orsey. As things go now, it was not a bed sale and included some works carrying great signatures. But some of the great names were attached to rather mountary danhs which met a well-deserved fate.

Even Edgard Degus, that greatest of all impressionist draftsmen, could turn out had pieces. A expon study of three dancers in clums, usty postures, probably done about 1903, was one of these. The same applies to the por-trait entitled "Young Woman Sewing by the Window," one of Camble Pissarro's Jesser efforts, dated 1902. It brought 99,570 francs. It had been touched up. in a very minor way—the foot of the chair was added, presumably by Pissarro's son, who painted in his father's style and il-instrated this picture in the book he wrote on his father in collaboration with Italian art historian Lionello Venturi. #### THEATER IN LONDON

Clowning Around With Henry VIII

By John Walker

LONDON, March 3 (IET). There are two major disaster areas in theater at the moment, One is the British musical; the other is the American thriller, as exemplified by Norman Krasna's dire "Lady Harry," which has just closed after less than a week at the Savoy.

In my moments of wilder fantasy. I imagine that the musicals and theflers are a form of aversicn therapy for theater junkles lke mysen.

It is easier to believe that than imagine that anyone theater management, producers, writers and actors can believe there is any profit, material or spiritual, to be spined from such a show as Leslie Bricusse's "Kings and Clowns" at the Phoenix Theatre. It is a musical on the muddled matrimonial life of King Henry VIII. Its grasp of history can be gauged from the final moments when Henry's deathbed is transformed into a huge effley of Queen Esizabeth I, ignoring the fact that Elizabeth's accession was 11 years and two (or three, if you count Lady Jane Grey) monerchs later.

Reductant Doves Its attempt at spectacle was then encapsulated when Eliza-beth's wig lifted off and half the audience and refusing to fly. The show remains as chetinately earthbound as the birds, dreaifly predictable in its low level of accomplishment. Bricusse's book is cull, his music is unoriginat and his lyrics consist of a run through a rhyming dictionary and some well-thumbed collection of fifth hand images. He seems to see Heary as an Everyman figure, representative of all men's relationships with women. His gix wives form a chcrus commenting on his actions and each other's, a device which might woork were they and Henry allowed some individuality.

But Henry is characterized as a stud, ever impatient for new conquests in the first half of the show, and as an impotent old man in the second.

man in the second.

This same course implicitly is applied to his wives. Catherine of Aragon puts her hair in curlers, Anne Boleyn does a striptease routine, Jane Seymour cffers him a cup of cocoa at bedfime and so it goes, intermin-

Mel Shapiro's direction emphasizes that this is a modern musical in fancy dress, that the characters, in so far as they have any personality are contemporary a dozen white doves appeared in their attitudes-except when from under it, gazing blearly at they dance, for the choreography recalls an anthology of the basic steps of the 1930s. He is desperate enough to have the court jester enter on a skateboard, in starch of at least one laugh.

Frank Finlay is miscast in the mie of Henry. He sings adequately, but, even in his build-up shoes, he is prysically too small for the role. And his always cccomplished acting has reality, attempting to touch something deep and emotionally accurate, that merely exposes the drab facetiousness of the enterprise.

Not for the first time, it is left to Anna Quayle to add a moment or two of genuine sparkls to a Bricusse musical By some marvelous comic skill she creates amusement from such lines as "It a wife puts her man in a pickie, she will get a sauerkraut." But it is hardly enough.

Julian Mitchell's witty but in-consequential "Half Life," starring Sir John Gleigud, which I reviewed in its original production at the Cottlesloe, has transferred to the Duke of York's Theatre.

Quentin Crisp's one-man show has moved on from the Duke of York's to the Ambassadors Thea-

LONDON, March 3 (Reuters). -Britain's official foreign cur-rency reserves fell $167 million in February to $20.7 hillion after repayment of foreign currency loans totaling $505 million and net new borrowing of $102 million, the Treasury said yesterday.

The figures showed an under-

The rise over the last four months has been more than $900 million, reflecting action by the Bank of England to slow the dollar's fall and the rise of sterling in foreign exchange trading analysts said.

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP-DJ).—As pieced together from U.S. officials' public pronouncements and private conversations, Washington's current plan is to aid the dollar with statements of concern and significant, rather than heavy, intervention in currency markets.

The problem as U.S. officials see it, is that there are no easy answers. Intervention through huge purchases of dollars could be very costly and ineffective. Other technical moves to help the dollar, such as controls on capital flows or import restrictions, would be counterproductive, in the view of top U.S. officials. So, for the time being the Cardiministration is relying on presidential lectures.

NEW . YORK. March 3 (Reuters). - The dollar will fall sharply on Monday unless support measures are introduced this weekend, informed bankers forecast today.

They said the market in New York generally expects some kind of action over the weekend, perhaps in conjunction with the Bundesbank, and operators will be disappointed if nothing happens. However, they noted a Bundesbank denial that any measures are planned. The sources said the Federal Reserve System and the U.S. Tressury have shown an unusual interest in and concern about the market in the past

Tyrannical Behavior a Disservice

Proxmire's 'Prosecution' of Miller

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, March 3 (WP).-In the wake of the Sert Lance affair, it is little wonder that Senate committees responsible for confirmation of important agency heads are taking an extra-careful look at all nominees.

But it is also fair to ask whether the effort by Sen William Proxmire, D-Wis., to derail President Carter's nomination of William Miller as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board was not a disservice to Mr. Miller, the President, the Federal Reserve and indeed, to the Senate itself. Sen. Promite, in his role as chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, is one of the more conscientions, hard-working senators, and better informed on the economy than most of them. But this time, he went beyond the role of the prudent examiner to assume the role of prosecu tor. A significant point is that from the start, Sen. Proxmire was unhappy with the Miller nom ination, having concluded that the president of Textron, Inc., did not have the technical background to be chairman of the Fed. Sen. Proxmire publicly accused Mr. Miller of involvement in a bribe to get business for Textron, but falled to produce facts to back up such a serious charge. His own committee (which had gone along with his demand for an investigation) overwhelmingly confirmed Mr. Miller, 14 to 1, with Sen. Proxmire casting the only negative vote. Mr. Miller's nomination was approved by the full Senate in a vote today.

But having failed to convict Mr. Miller, Sen. Proximire proceeded to smear him, suggesting that he withdraw from the nomination because "a cloud" would hang over him. Such innuendo from a U.S. senator goes beyond the mere har-rassment he foisted on Patricia Harris when she came before his committee as der. Carter's nomince as Secretary of Housing and Urban Develop-

The facts in the Miller case are these. When Mr. Miller was president of Textron, its Bell Helicopter unit made a payment of $2.9 million in 1973 to Air Taxi Co. in Iran as a commission for obtaining a $500-million helicopter contract with the government of Iran.

It turns out that the chief of the Iranian Air Force, one Gen. Mohammed Khatemi, late brother-in-law of the Shah of Iran, was also a partner or owner of Air Taxi.

Sen, Proxmire charged that the commission to Air Taxi was really a bribe to Mr. Khatemi, the sort of disreputable business practice that has gotten many an American corporation into hot

But when Sen. Promire made the charge on Jan. 24 at Mr. Miller's first appearance before the committee, Mr. Miller steadfastly said he had no knowledge of Mr. Khatemi's dual role, and had he known, he would not have approved such a paymen

Sen. Proximire has never been able to shake Mr. Miller's story. After a six-week investigation by the committee's agents, there has been adduced not a single shred of evidence that Mr. Miller has been telling anything but the truth.

Thereupon, the Wisconsin senator blandly suggested to Mr. Miller that since the Securities and change Commission is conducting a broad investigation into Textron that would last four to six months, Mr. Miller should step saide anyway. Mr. Miller angrily and correctly snapped that withdrawal "is the most presponsible thing I could do."

temporary office at the Fed, Mr. Miller was calm and confident. He knows that Arthur Burns will be a tough act to follow, but it does not faze him. Only time will tell how Mr. Miller performs. But his credentials are still impressive, and he conveys to visitors a real-world grasp of the enormous responsibilities he is about to assume. As an angry Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., told Sen. Proxmire, "You haven't laid a glove on him."

In their own ways, both Mr. Miller and Pat Harris handled Sen. Proxmire well, giving as good as they got. But the Wisconsin senator is so bright that he must be having some secondthoughts on his tyrannical behavior.

Dollar's Fall Hurts Some U.S. Concerns

In Contrast to Classic Theory

MUNICH March 3 (AP-DJ) .--There is a lingering suspicion in some circles in Western Europe that the United States is still acting under a classic economic theory: A declining dollar in foreign exchange trading helps American business because it significantly increases U.S. exports, thus spurring the overall econ-

Spending Plans Are Unchanged In U.S. in Quarter

NEW YORK, March 3 (Reuters).—Capital spending plans by the 1,000 largest U.S. manufacturers in the 1977 fourth quarter were virtually unchanged over the third period, but total 1977 spending plans by these firms rose 31 per cent over 1976, the Conference Board said today.

Backlogs of these companies climbed from $47.5 billion at the beginning of 1977 to $57.3 billion at the start of 1978, a rise of 20

"This rise in unspent backlog is an important factor supporting expectations of a substantial 1978 gain in capital spending by the 1,000 largest firms, even though the growth of their capital appropriations this year is ted to be quite modest," said Lora Collins, director of business conditions analysis at the Conference Board.

The Conference Board projected a 15-per-cent to 20-per-cent rise in actual capital spending by the 1,000 largest companies in 1978, but a much slower rise in Such a sizable spending gain by the hig companies in 1978 would be compatible with a smaller rise in total capital spending" by all manufacturers, it said. Appropriations are expected to inase by 7 to 8 per cent in both 1978 and 1979.

The petroleum industry, accounting for about 25 per cent of spending plans and actual spending by the 1,000 largest companies was again a major factor in total appropriations behavior in the final 1977 quarter, it said. Appropriations by this industry fell 22 per cent after jumping event, the stated purpose of the United States has been to stabilize monetary markets rather than to keep the value of the dollar at any particular level. Although it will be several more months before any currency-relat-ed increase in U.S. exports shows up in official statistics, it is already clear that "the falling dollar did not create the great selling advantage some people in Washington thought it would," says Frank Well, U.S. assistant com-merce secretary for domestic and international business.

mark, fewer marks are needed to buy American-made products. As a result, American goods become cheaper to German buyers, and this price advantage should boost sales of American companies exporting to West Germany.

But such theoretical advantages do not help a sizable chunk of U.S. exports to Western Europe. Of the estimated $34 billion of U.S. merchandise exports to Western Europe last year, the Commerce Department says that about $8.4 billion were agricultural products and farm-goods sales are far more likely to be influenced by European agricultural policies and the weather than by foreign-exchange rates. And even among manufacturing companies, the advantages to dollar tend to be slighter than anticipated. For example, sales at Beckman Instruments GmbH, the West German subsidiary of Beckman Instruments Inc. of California, have been rising over the past several months. But the inc has been checked by West Ger-

There are a number of other factors at work undermining the price advantage conferred by the dollar's decline. An important one is the high rate of inflation in the United States, with the rate running at around 6.5 per cent a year and threatening to go higher. Mr. Rath says his home office has had to order price increases more than once compensate for rising costs in the United States. Unfortunat-ely, the weakness of the European Market has prevented Mr. Rath from passing on these scheduled increases to his cus-

NEW YORK, March 3 (AP-DJ) .- The basic U.S. money supply dipped slightly, loan demand at major New York banks picked up slightly while foreign purchases of marketable U.S. Treasurv securities set a record in the latest reporting week according to figures released yesterday through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. The basic M-1 money supply dipped $400 million in the week ended Feb. 22. But M-2, a broader measure was in $300 million The changes were well within estimates analysts had made earlier in the week. The Fed estimated the basic money supply averaged a seasonally adjusted $335.8 billion in the week, down from the previous week's $336.2 billion, revised from an originally reported $336.1 billion M-2 was put at $814.2 billion, up from a revised $813.0 billion. M-1 is the total of private demand, or checking account, deposits, plus cash in the public hand. M-2 consists of cash plus all private deposits at commercial banks except those large ones represented by certificates. The Fed also reported its holdings of marketable U.S. government securities in custody for foreign central banks and official institutions jumped a record $2.18 billion to $83.52 billion.

The latest gain, which eclipsed the previous record of $1.94 billion set in the Nov. 16 week, reflected the battering the dollar has taken in foreign exchange trading as central banks, buying dollars in support operatio invest the excess reserves in U.S.

The heavy foreign investo continued yesterday. On behalf of foreigners, the Fed entered

U.S. Trade Deficit Widened in January

WASHINGTON, March 3 (Reuters).—The U.S. monthly trade deficit with the rest of the world increased in January to nearly $24 billion compared with $2.12 billion in December, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said exports fell to $10.01 billion in Jarmery from $11.01 billion in December Imports also dropped, to $12.39 billion from $13.12 bil-

Analysia said both import and export figures for December were artificially inflated because of the end of the U.S. East Coast dock strike, so the January decline was not surprising.

There was no real change in the month to month pattern when the effects of the strike were discounted, they said.

The government is now col-lecting its trade statistics on a slightly different basis, counting imports in the month they acrather than in the month they are registered, but this is not expected to make any difference in the overall trade picture. The Commerce Department has applied the new method of logging imports to all of last year, resulting in a slight nar-rowing of the annual deficit to billion compared with $26.72 billion under the method.

The big trade deficit, a large part of which was attributable to costly imports of oil, has been one factor given as a reason for the recent weakness of the dollar on world currency markets.

Oil imports rose sharply last month, increasing by 12.5 per cent to almost 193 million barreis, which cost $2.6 billion. In December, oil imports totaled just over 172 million barrels which were valued at $23 billion Analysis said the sharp increase in oil imports was probably the result of both the severe winter weather in the eastern half of the country and the growing switch to oil by industry as the result of the coal strike. The cost of an average barrel of oil from oversens was $13.59 January, a jump of more than $1 from January, 1977, when the average price was $12.57. At his press conference yesterday, President Canter said U.S.

According to the theory, when the dollar falls in value against a currency like the West German the money market three timesonce for $320 million in Treasury bills to be delivered immed

ately; another for $200 million to be delivered Friday; and a third to enter a $600-million repurchase agreement, under which dealers sold securities and agreed to buy them back at a later date. The heavy foreign demand helped push prices up, and rates down, on government issues. The letest 13-week Treasury bill, for example, closed at 6.37 per cent bid, yesterday down from 6.42 per cent bid Wednesday. The companion 26-week bill dipped to a bid of 6.67 per cent from 6.72 per cent.

On the credit front, the Fed reported that commercial and industrial loans on the books of the leading New York banks rose $282 million, following a $215-million rise the previous week and compared with a $404-million gain in the like week a vear earlier It was the third consecutive weekly increase. Over that period such business loans registered a cumulative gain of $536 million. In the latest week, the Fed estimated that holdings of bankers' acceptances fell by almost $240 million. Such trade bills are normally considered money market instruments but are counted as loans when held by banks. Thus, the statistics indicate a more robust demand for traditional-type loans.

ch imports were expected to level off this year and cited this as one of several factors he said had not been taken into account in assessing the condition of the dollar. U.S. exports of food to the rest of the world fell slightly in January, as did shipments of planes and other transportation

Food imports were basically unchanged during January, while there was a fall in imports of automobiles and general manufacturing goods.

MoneySupply Figures Help Stock Prices

NEW YORK, March 3 (Reuters).—Prices on the New York Stock Exchange held a narrow gain today in moderate trading for the second day this week after falling the first three sessions.

The market opened higher on a report yesterday that the U.S. money supply declined and on reports that the dollar advanced in foreign exchange trading.

However, prices trimmed earlier gains. Analysts said investors were being cautious in advance of the weekend voting by the nation's and American Motors reporting declines while Ford Motor chalked up a gain of 20 per cent, Newton Zinder of E.F. Hutton & Co. said the sales figures were 'a bit disappointing but not unexpected." Ford rose 7/8 to 43 5/8 and GM 1/8 to 58 1/2, but Chrys-ler shipped 1/4 to 10 7/8 and AMC proved wrong if we continue to get books like this one from writers who are dying. They bring one increasingly close to the thing itself. It may not be too fanciful to say that all of a writer's life is an apprenticeship for the description of death.

Violet Weingarten was an attractive and vital woman of 60 when she died of cancer in 1976, after two years of treatment and uncertainty. She had already written four novels when she began keeping this journal and she knew what she was about. She understood that modern technology has inevitably mechanized death and robbed it of that dramatic sense of finality that used to make it seem so "classical." In "Intimations of Mortality," she observes that a medically monitored illness is mocked by the minutiae of treat-ment and by the obsessive reading of signs, and that this is an integral part of its tragedy.

When we are dying, Mrs Weingarten's journal demonstrates most of us do not cease to hope against hope, to keep up a "brave" front, to lid to those we love and allow them to lie to us Everyand enters into a conspiracy of cliches, perhaps because death is too difficult to articulate If one were to say. "I am dying," what would the next sentence be? Can you discuss your own death for a year? It is proverbial that dying people tell no lies, but the truth comes out only in the last breath.

The author was afraid of being "messy." of turning her family into "emotional garbage pails." She clung to her dignity. and, perhaps this was a mistake, one that robbed her last months of emotional expression. Perhaps we ought to know more about the dignity of desperation If anything can afford to be theatrical, it is death

In "Intimations of Mortality." the author observes that she had no unfinished business to mourn—she had always done what she wanted Her death was not a tragedy of incompleteness: She simply wished to go on living because she enjoyed it.

"I feel, she said, "in need of a philosophy. These days most of us go naked to death without religion or philosophy, consoled only by what we have done, by those we have loved and those who have loved us

She was not panicked by death. but intimidated. Like a shy roman reading sex manuals, she writes, she bought how-to-do-it cose monks in AD 881, indicating books on death but, in the last that the book arrived in Japan analysis, every death is copyabout then, the Chinese cows righted. Like every sexual act, it

WHILE Freud believed that it is impossible for us to imagine our own deaths, he may be separated in the person who is experiencing it. Mrs. Weingarten mentions with incredulity the ultimate intellectual presumption of Aldous Huxley, who read "The Book of the Dead" to his dying wife, as if that would belp her.

Death used to make believers of us, now it makes skeptics. There is no longer any form for the thing, no longer the secu-rity of a structured event Wa almost at random. A completely secular death is reduced to theater: one tries to perform well, not to muff one's lines. On his deathbed, Andre Gide is alleged to have said, "Before you quote me, make sure I'm con-

Of course it is a comfort to have people you love around you, but even if all humanity were to come to see you off, even if the world came to a temporary stop, you would still have to go alone. And Violet Weingarten knew

If there is time for reflection, dying comments on the life that it completes, and this sense of perspective, of clarification, is the best part of "Intimations of Mortality" Mrs. Weingarten gives us the feeling that having lived well is as dramatically satisfying in its way as a good nov-d. Perhaps it would be true to say that, in her case, death, like art. imitates life.

Nicklaus' Inverrary Triumph Evokes '63 Spectacle in France

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, March 3 (NYT), Jack Nicklaus'a golf is better than his memory. When he came charging home in the Inverrary Classic on the weekend, picking up four strokes on Grier Jones, three on Jerry Pate and Andy Bean and two on Hale Irwin with five birdies on the last five holes, he was asked whether he had put on such a finish before. "I can't imagine any other time," he said.

"It was the most remarkable thing I've ever seen in my life," said Lee Trevino, comparing it with Reggie Jackson's three home runs in the last World Series game and Leon Spinks's victory over Muhammad Ali. Well, it was remarkable but it wasn't unprecedented.

Fifteen years ago, Nicklaus and Arnold Pakmer represented the United States in the World Cop competition at Saint-Nom-la-Breteche near Versailles in France. If Jack has forgotten his performance there, perhaps he wanted to forget it. Maybe he deliberately put it out of his mind as too outrageously theatri-

Downright Scandalous The things he did on the very first hole were downright scandalous. The hole was a legitimate par 5 for club members but a triple short for a pro with Jack's power, measuring somewhere between 450 and 500 yards. In his four rounds, Jack played it eagle, eagle, eagle, birdie, and that was

have been a trifle shorter than Inverrary's 7,127 yards, but this was no exhibition on a pitch-andputt course, and the opposition was at least as distinguished as the field Nicklaus encountered last week. The World Cup, now 25 years old, is a movable feast that leaps from continent to continent, usually playing national capitals, matching two-man teams from practically every land where the game is known. The morning of the opening round found the prince glowering through a clammy fog. "So," he said, "I am sending to the sisters to get back my eggs."

Soggy turf made course play long for little guys, but not for Nicklans. His second shot on the opening hole was 20 feet from the pin, and he ran down the putt for his first eagle 3. After that he had five birdies and three bogies for a 67. Palmer's 69 gave the pair a tie for first place with Al Balding and Stan Leonard of Prince Michel changed his mind about reclaiming the eggs, but the weather didn't relent. Day by day the fog thickened, until the green hills and yellow bunkers were all but blotted out. Realizing that if a hitter like Nicklaus tried to fire a tee shot into that soup the ball would never be seen in, officials postponed the final round for 24 hours.

It didn't help much. Next day a gray souffle garnished the fair-ways. The climate dripped sullenly from the trees. The Duke of Windsor and King Leopold showed up as they had for each earlier round, but the weather reduced the gallery to a minimum. Reluctantly, the committee decided to cut the final round to nine holes. At this point Nicklaus and Palmer were tied

NHL Rangers Doubt WHA Jets Can Find Money to Keep 2 Stars

NEW YORK, March 3 (NYT),-Although the new owners of the Winnipeg Jels have matched verbally the New York Rangers' offer of more than a half-million dollars a year to each of the Jets' two Swedish-born stars, the Rangers' president does not sound worried that he has lost the players,

Bill Jennings said that the players, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson, would call in an arbitrator, who would have 30 days to determine whether the new owners of the World Hockey Association team could produce the money.

"If the arbitrator believes the Jets cannot match our offers," said Jennings, "then the Jets will have an additional 14 days to put half the total money package for the two players in the bank."

The Rangers made the offer in January when they enter tained the players in New York at places such as the "21" Club. Nilsson and Hedberg will become free agents after this season. However, a clause in their contract permits the Jets to come within $25,000 a year of matching any other team's

That means the Jets would have to deposit about $1 million in a bank if the arbitrator believed they would have trouble meeting the contract they offered. As of last Saturday night, none of the Winnipeg players had received their latest paychecks

Rugby's Triple Crown Inspires Welsh, Irish

By Bob Donahue

PARIS, March 3 (IHT).-Ire- flyhalf Tony Ward, one of the land and Wales play for high rugby stakes in Dublin tomorrow while Scotland and England meet in Edinburgh. The French players will be watching the Dublin game on television.

Having beaten England 19-61 and Scotland (22-14), the Welsh need only a victory tomorrow to become the first country to take the Triple Crown in three consecutive years. No team has managed it since four-way piay started in 1884.

The Welsh have the added locentive of preserving a chance for the Grand Slam when France, which has already played and won three matches, goes to Cardiff on March 18. But Ireland the team no one expected, has invited Itself to the head of the Five Nations table and is looking for a chair. Wales had better watch its seat.

The Irish, flelding a revamped young team and looking like the weakest of the five contenders, started with a victory over Scotland at home (12-9) and then nearly won in Parls on Feb. 18. That near-upset (10-9) fired Irish hope for their first Triple Crown since 1949

Quiet Perfectionism

Ireland's assets against a great Welsh XV start with a 35-year-old Belfast solicitor named Camer-Michael Heoderson Gibson, a teetotaler and nonsmoker whose flair, grace and quiet perfectionism are unmatched in modern rugby. He was still the sharpest runner on the field in Paris two weeks ago.

Tomorrow Mike Gibson plays his 64th game for Ireland. That will be the new world record for appearances for any country. It will mean festival fervor and thus added trouble for Wales at Lans-

Wales since 1970, nor even scored a try against them in Dubliu since that year. They went to extraordinary lengths against France and may not yet have recovered fully, but they will be loog on spirit again tomorrow.

Scotland and England have yet to win a match and each will be fighting to leave the championship's wooden spoon to the other. The prospect is mystifying in England's case, after the English revived last year from a string of dreary seasons and started the present championship as the likeliest challenger to France and

The Scots bring in a 6-8 lock, David Gray-the biggest man in the international game. England. too, fields a new lock in Maurice Colclough. He ruos a bar and plays rugby in Angouléme, and he replaces another bartending Englishman in France, Nigel Horton, who plays for Toulouse.

A Second Chance

Andy Irvine, possibly the world's best fullback, returns for Scotland after a shoulder injury. Flybalf Ian McGeecban has had to withdraw. English backs John Horton and Paul Dodge, who failed to impress in their debuts last month because of the muddy field at Twickenham, will get a second chance to improve England's disappointing back play. Billy Beaumont will be defending his captaincy.

Another new captain who has vet to consolidate his leadership France's Bastiat, said this week he hoped Wales would win in Dublin so as to preserve the luster of the finale in Cardiff on March 18. Wales-France remains the big match in a Five Nations calendar that could not have been more dramatically designed. But the fourth of the five Saturdays tomorrow is going to be more than a program filler.

Orantes Is Upset by Higueras In Duel Between Spain's Top 2

MEMPHIS March 3 (UPI).-Jose Higueras upset fifth-seeded Manuel Orantes, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, yesterday in a duel between two Spaniards in the second round of the national indoor tennis

Higueras's victory over Orantes, his first in six attempts, left the field in the $225,000 tournament with only three se Jimmy Connors, Sandy Mayer and Eddie Dibbs - for quarterfinal rounds that began tonight.

Higueras, who has ranked in Spain as the No. 2 player behind Orantes for the past four years, said the victory meant only that his own play was improving.

"He's one of the top players in the world," Higueras, 24, said. "That means I'm improving."

Orantes, a 28-year-old lefthander, was the 1975 winner of the U.S. Open at Forest Hills over Connors. Higueras said his serve, which intimidated Orantes in the first set, did not carry him through the second set, but his net game belped gain the triumph. net! for me," he said, "because Cliff Drysdale, 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, and Mayer best Stan Smith, 6-2, 6-3.

A Contract on Ham

WASHINGTON-I've tried to avoid it, but I don't seem to have much choice. I'm going to do a think-piece on Hamilton Jordan. Last week the White House ordered its mimeograph machines nut on a war footing and issued a 33page white paper concerning a subject of urgeot national interest: "Whether HBm Jordan, while eating a steak at a Bingles' bar called Sarsfield's, did or did not Buchwald spit a part of his

Amaretto topped with whipped cream at a lady sitting next to him at the bar." The unidentified woman said he did. The White House, after interviewing the bartenders and witnesses, concluded he didn't. I am inclined to believe Ham Jordan and will continue to until The Washington Post gossip columnist who printed the item produces the smoking pistol, which in this case would be the lady's Amarctto-stained blouse But the question isn't whether Ham did or did not splt his drink as much as what is behind lt. The fact of the matter is that there is now a "press contract" out on Hamilton Jordan, and he is a marked man in Washington.

Somewhere out there at this moment is a woman, lady or girl. who is prepared to show Ham Jordan he isn't any better than she is, and "he may be the second most important person in the administration, but by gosh he's just another guy trying to pick her up in B bar, etc., etc., etc." Ham may be sowing his wild oats in Washington, but he isn't any different from most guys of his age who sow oats-with onc exception. He now has a reputation and someone is out to cut him down to size. He's now in a class with Muhammad All Joe Namath, Marion Brando and many other personalities who can no longer go into a bar for a steak without some girl challenging him to splt an Amaretto on her blouse.

If there is anyone to blame for Ham'e position it's President Carter. By refusing to let his people drink liquor and whipped cream in the White House, the President is driving them out into the streets, where they are forced to take abuse and whatever else they dish out at a singles' hangout on Friday night. Do you think Ham wants to go to Sarsfield's to relax and imwind? Do you think it's fun for him to fight through the women to get to a bar stool for a shot? Do you believe, for one second, that if Ham could get a decent drink in the White House from a friendly bartender he would nut up with all the gaff that goes with trying to get a bite in a joint reeking with spilled Amaretto drinks? The answer is obviously "no."

So what have you got? An assistant to the President of the United States who has been fingered by the gossip columnists. Since he has been recently separated from his wife, he is B marked man by every woman who goes to a eingles' bar looking how to get even with a guy who won't pick her up. Bring on the photographers and you've got the greatest no-win situation since Norman Meiler took a poke at Gore Vidal.

The real problem is that the aide who sits next to the Oval Office is supposed to be taken seriously. If the aide calls up a uniou official and says. "I'm speaking for the President; he wants you to start mining coal right away." and the person on the other end says, "Yeh, tell it to the boys at Sarsfield's," this country is in a lot of trouble.

My only solution for Ham is that he stay in the White House day and night. Some day, maybe a year from now, people will forget about the pyramids of Egypt and the Amaretto with the whipped cream on the blouse and he will be a free man again. Right now, he's a sitting duck It isn't your fault, Ham, but when Jody has to start putting out white papers on how you spend your nights, you have no choice but to dig a forhole in

with a poncho and wait until your long nightmare is over.

War Is Bad for Gun Merchant's Business

By Jeffrey Robinson

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (IHT) - Sam Cummings looks like anything but the world's most important independent arms dealer. He is a pleasant, smiling, likable 51year-old milliomaire who tries to live down the image of arms dealers as men who sell wars. In fact, he seems all too glad to explain that, strangely enough, war is bad for his busi-

"Very bed. As soon as there is any sort of trouble in the world, the governments themselves get into the arms business and force the private dealers out. Just look at who's supplying arms in Ethiopia and Somalia now. Governments, not private dealers. We've never supplied any nation anywhere in the world during a time of real or potential hostilities. Bot then, yes, you'd be quite accurate in saying that my busi-ness, like war, is based totally on human folly and not on human wisdom."

As a child in Philadelphia. Cummings found a rusted machine gun and it became his favorite toy. He played with it for years. His interest in guns got him an instructor's job with the Army during World War II. and then a three-year post with the CIA during the Korean those same pictures."

So in 1953 he decided to go into his own business. He minted cards and stationery with a Washington, D.C. post office-bez address and called himself vicepresident of the International Arms Corporation

AUTOMOBILES

Jeffrey Robinson. Sam Cummings

"I couldn't afford an office and I figured I'd only be vicepresident so that anyone I dealt with would think there was at least one other person in the company, and maybe a secre-

He wrote to governments all over the world, offering to buy any surplus arms they had. His only answer came from the police chief of Panama.

"That was especially fortunate because in those days Panama was one of the cheapest places you could fly to. The police chief had a stock of 5,000-6,000 weapons for sale. Forty years worth of stuff they had taken off bank robbers and drunken sailors. I offered him $25,000, he accepted, and I was then faced with the problem of where to get the money, because I didn't have a nickel, I went back to the States, rang a dealer in California and offered him the lot for $60,000. He said yes. I arranged the deal, took a $15,000 profit and rushed back to Central America, where my friend the Panamian police chief put me in touch with his friends who also had guns for sale." As his business grew, military people started asking him where they could buy quality arms. He knew the manufacturers, thanks to his former CIA connections, so he found himself acting as a broker, "This was during the years of the rearm-ament of Europe. The timing was right. There has always been a huge collectors' market but the surplus arms market had never really been exploited in quite the way I was doing it. However, brains had nothing to do with my success. I fell into it. Dumb luck and serendipity."

Magic Number

Today he is president of a corporation listing companies all over the world, including his own manufacturing plants in the United States and England. And although he ham't yet hit the magic number of $100 million worth of business in a year, he admits that the goal is within sight. While he manufactures for both the sports and the police/ military markets, the big money seems to be in buying surplus, which is then sold to smaller nations for which that surplus is considered fairly modern equipment. For instance, he paid the Israelis about $2 mil-lion for arms captured in the June, 1967, war. He also bought spoils of the Yom Kippur war, although he tried to make a deal for 500 tanks as well and the United States said no. It seems U.S. private citizens may not own artillery. As late as 1971, Sam Cummings had spent $1.5 million with the South Vietnamese government on some 250,000 units of battlefield sal-Vage. "But that's only R pittance if you consider that there's more than $5 billion worth of equip-ment that we left behind in Vietnam. The U.S. government admits to, for example, 700,000 M-16 rifles at $259 a crack. Add that up with the planes, the tanks, the parts to go with them, and I would guess that the Vietnamese Army, thanks to America, is probably stocked good for the next five years, maybe even more'

He doesn't do much business with the NATO countries, as most of their equipment comes through government channels. But he does buy their surplus when he can, reselling it in Central America and the Far East. He can't, however, always move equipment as fast as he can acquire it, so he's forced to store it Because Sam Cummings is who he is, a lot of people watch very closely what he does. He has personally arranged deals with heads of state such as Batista, Castro, Somoza, Trufillo, Sukarno, Selassie, Nehru, and was in the midst of one with Col. Qadhafi when the Libyan leader nationalised British Petroleum, and the British government retaliated by refusing to give Cummings the permission to finalize the deal.

No Diamonds

"Actually, mins is a very mundane business. There are no midnight deliveries of guns in exchange for diamonds. I'm subject to stringent government regulations and controls. Believe me, if I ever tried to sell arms the way governments sell arms, I'd end up in jall forever."

He sells arms legally, following the laws to the letter, maintaining very accurate records of every transaction, big or small And it's a good thing, he says, because there are times when certain people want to see those records. One of those times was Nov.

23, 1963. Within 15 minutes after John Kennedy was shot, the FBI rang Cummings's Virginia office. They said they were on their way. They wanted to go through my files. They got there 20 minutes after the phone call and set up a direct line to Dallas. As soon as the murder wespon was found in the Texas School Book Depositary, they received a wire photo of the gun. In some 10 years, we had sold about 200,000 Italian rifles of the same general type used to kill Kennedy. The PBI went through our records, but the murder weapon wasn't one of ours. We were able, though, to help the FBI trace the gun, and we were the people who supplied the information that led them to the Chicago dealer who had sold it to Lee Harvey Oswald by mail."

PEOPLE: No Odor of Sanctity For Sancta Susanna

'Sancta Susanna" lays an egg. according to Vatican spokesman Romeo Panciroli. Worse than that, the Rev. Panciroli said about the Paul Hindemith opera, tt is "blasphemous and sacrilegious." The opera, a 1922 opus based on a work by German expressionist August Stramm, has been in trouble before.

The Rev. Panciroli felt that it was especially disturbing and shocking that "those who call themselves responsible would present in the middle of Christian Rome a production that denies profound spiritual values."

Soprano Felicia Weathers plays the lead role in which a nude nun expresses her carnal love of Jesus. Miss Weathers has some experience in such roles, having appeared nude, or nearly nude, in pro-ductions of the opera "Salome" in the United States and else-

John Dean 3d says that he knows who Deep Throat really is, but he won't tell. Deep Throat was the mysterious figure whin furnished Washington Post reporter Robert Woodward with vital information on the Watergate scandal. Dean, former Presdent Richard Nixon's former White House counsel, said in a radio talk that he had telephoned Deep Throat and told the man that he (Dean) was onto him. "Silence fell on his end of the telephone," Dean said, adding that he could expose the man's identity, but "my frame of mind is not to." In any case, Dean said, Deep Throat is not Fred Fielding, one of his White House deputies, as suggested by another Watergate figure, H.R. Haldeman. in his book, "The Ends of Power."

And here's something about Mr. Watergate himself: The National Archives has found about 30 gifts from foreign leaders at Richard Nixon's San Clemente home. But the archives concludes that the gifts were packed accidentally in the haste of Nixon's departure from the White House, Ang. 9. 1973 . . Four years already.

Switzerland Details Rules On Securities Sales' Ban

ZURICH, March 8 (AP-DJ) .-The Swiss National bank today issued a detailed set of rules for the almost complete ban on purchases of Swiss-franc securities by non-resident foreigners it announced last week. The bank also set a quota on sales to foreigners of new Swissfranc bonds and privately placed notes of foreign borrowers. .

The ban, effective last Tuesday, was designed to curb the inflow of foreign funds into the country and thus slow the rise of the Swiss tranc in foreign exchange

Swiss Franc 15% Too High, Official Says

ZURICH, March 6 (Reuters).—The Swiss franc is now overvalued by at least 15 if not 20 per cent, Swiss National Bank president Pritz Leutwiler said today.

He added that this was bound to affect the country's economy but it may be 1979 ... before the full effects of the franc's sharp appreciation since December are felt.

Meanwhile, it is disappointing that import prices have not fallen further, Mr. Leutwiler said. Given the franc's present value. Switzerland ought to have a negative inflation rate, he added

Mr. Leutwiler repeated that Switzerland will not introduce formal exchange controls in the form of a two-tier market to counter the franc's rise. But the bank has not used up all its ammunition in the fight to stop the currency appreciating, he said.

Later, a spokesman for the Swiss National bank said it intends to revive its plans to institute a licensing system for foreign exchange dealers. The plan was first proposed more than two years ago but was subsequently dropped.

In addition, dealers said that the dollar was also adversely workers had rejected a settlement endorsed by the Carter administration and had instead decided to continue their threemonth-old coal strike.

the miners back to work, such an announcement did not occur before the European foreign ex-change market closed.

The only exception to the ban is new Swiss-franc denominated bonds and privately placed notes of foreign borrowers. But even here, banks handling such paper are required to apply a quota system reserving 65 per cent for Swiss citizens and residents. The secondary market for such paper, however, is closed to foreigners. The central bank's issue today seems designed to slear up any areas of confusion. It says, for instance, that to the purposes of this ban, foreigners who have lived in Switzerland for more than two years, or those whose families reside in Switzerland, are exempt from the ban as are diplomats stationed in the country and international organizations. However, foreign-controlled firms in Switzerland will be considered as foreigners and subject to the pantif they do not have any operations, in this country. Foreign-controlled companies set up to buy securities will also be considered as foreigners and subject to the restrictions.

The central bank said that Liechtenstein, which uses the same currency and generally folhas imposed a similar ban. This means that the so-called letterbox companies in Liechtenstein, possibly totaling 30,000 concerns, will be subject to the restrictions.

The bank said that if Swiss companies enlarge their capital, foreign holders of shares will be allowed to exercise their sub-scription rights, provided the capital increase is approved by the central bank.

It said that if foreign interests increase their participation in a Swiss company, and if this increase is obviously for commer-cial reasons rather than simply channelling funds into the country, such investment may be allowed subject to its approval and presumably on a case-by-case basis. Foreign participation in a limited company, however, is not restricted.

The bank said that any intermediary role, even if both seller and buyer are foreign, is banned as is the sale of securities to foreigners in any way, including through exporting the paper. Fines up to 100,000 Swiss francs plus a jail term are the penalties for infringement of these rules.

U.S. Law Aids Europeans

Corporate Morality and Business

By Paul Lewis

PARIS, March 6 (NYT).-Foreign corporations are laughing up their sleeves at the U.S. Senate these days. The dollar may be tumbling and world currency markets in unprecedented diserray, but the Senate took its time in letting William Miller pick up the untended reins of the Federal Reserve Board because Textron Inc., the conglomerate he used to head, may have made an improper payment to win a foreign contract several years ago. Mr. Miller says he knew nothing about it, but Congress seems bent on showing that next to nothing claims priority these days over its new-found desire to keep U.S.

But the more the Senate vaunts its concern about corporate morality, the more European and other foreign businessmen think they are securing a competitive edge over their American rivals. It may not be much of an edge and it probably will not last long. But the prevailing philosophy among European companies and European governments is that everything that brings in orders, including bribery, helps in a time of worldwide recession.

The United States is now the only industrial country that actually forbids its businessmen by law from bribing a foreign official in order to secure an order. All other industrial countries probabit the bribing of their own officials, but broadly consider other countries' officials fair game. It is too early yet to measure with any precision how much of a handleap this difference in national attitudes imposes on U.S. corporations, but circumstancial evidence suggests they are the losers so far.

tions may suffer abroad is the simple fact that no other industrial government currently plans to outlaw bribery by its own companies. Evidently, they think it can be useful. According to the British management magazine Chief Executive, over 20 per cent of British corporate directors believe their companies have lost business be-cause they failed to bribe or to bribe enough.

In the developing world, however, bribery still appears to be a useful business tool, and it is there that U.S. firms are likely to feel the effects of the new law most keenly. It is not easy to nin down concrete examples, but all European businessmen accept that "kickbacks," "commissions". or whatever the euphemism may be, are often expected in the developing world.

In many parts of black Africa, political leaders are still almost expected to lina their pockets when in office, while in some of the new Arab oil states there is no real distinction between the private wealth of the ruling sheikhs and the national government's resources. And so, in allowing their corporations to behave as they think fit in these markets, European governments say they are just recognizing the brutal

It is not certain that U.S. corporations really will be stopped from greasing the odd palm or two by the new anti-bribery law. They can still employ local sales agents who would be expected to take care of any dirty work necessary out of their fat commissions. It will also be hard to keep track of what foreign subsidiary companies, subject to foreign laws, are really doing. Elliot Richardson, the former attorney general, has already warned that in the courts the new U.S. bribery ban may prove unenforceable.

GENEVA, March 6 (AP-DJ) .~-The Clarkson Co., of Canada today said it now was ready to distribute to investors, mainly residents of West Germany, about 350,000 shares of the Dreyfus Fund Inc. that have been blocked since November, 1972, because of the collapse of Investors Overseas Ltd. (IOS).

Clarkson was appointed trustee for the blocked shares by an Ontario court, which on Feb. 28 authorized the distribution of the shares, currently valued at about $3.7 million or $10.55 a share. #### WHISTLE

By James Jones. Delacorte. 457 pp. $10.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

James Jones had almost finished when he died last year. (Although he did not finish it, he left enough in the way of notes for a friend, Willie Morris, to summarize the events of the final 3 1/2 chapters of a total of "Whistle" is also the final work in the author's World War II trilogy, which began in 1951 with "From Here to Eternity," and continued, in 1962, with "The Thin Red Line." It concerns several wounded survivors of the infantry company that was featured in the two earlier books, three of whom—lst Sgt. Mart Winch, Mess Sgt. John Strange, and Pvt. Bobby Prell ss Jones explains in an introductory note to "Whistle"-appeared respectively as Weish and Storm and Witt in "The Thin Red Line" and as Warden and Stark and Prewitt in "from Here

Returning now Stateside on s hospital ship, in the midst of the war, Winch, Strange, and Prell, along with non-Regular Army Sgt. Marion Landers, suffer less from their wounds than they do from a mixture of survival guilt, fear of recovery and return to combat and resentment of "the nice soft people" who are manning the home front. The balance of the novel describes their physical recuperation at an Army hospital in Tennessee, their lives and bawdy times in the adjoining town of Luxor (which Jones, in his note, says is a cross between Memphis and Nashville), and the eventual disintegration brought on by their psychic wounds.

Trying to look back over 25 years of reading James Jones, I would say that "Whistle" is at least as well done as "From Here to Eternity' (though of course one doesn't experience the sense of discovery that one did with the earlier book) and not quite up to "The Thin Red Line" (which remains Jones's masterpiece). But the significant thing is that "Whistle," along with the two other parts of the trilogy, is so clearly superior to anything else that Jones ever wrote. So it will be said that James

Jones remained arrested until the end—that for all he tried to do with life as a civilian ("Some Came Running"), with life under the sea ("Go to the Widow-Maker"), with life in a revolution ("The Merry Month of May"), and with death in Vietnam ("Viet Journal"), he could never outgrow his experience of World War II. He was stuck in it until the very end; and the long time it took him to com-plete "Whistle" reflects his reflects his struggle to escape his fate, while the fact that he did finally complete it (or nearly) represents his capitulation. Or so it will be said. But why then, if it is stuck back in World War II, does "Whistle" speak to us so cloquently? There are any number of obvious answers to this question. For one thing, Jones has hammered to perfection s prose style, which, though, la appears

"WHISTLE" is the novel that to be awkward and slovenly, is so direct and consistent in its way of seeing the world, that it contributes its own moral force to the narrative. And for another thing, Jones goes on being able to convey, as perhaps no other writer of his or any succeeding generation has been able to do, the simultaneous sense of terror and release that comes from knowing that one must die in battle. This sense is what haums the four heroes of "Whistle." And being redeemed from their fate proves even more destructive than fulfilling it.

But there is a less obvious reason for the immediacy of Jones's last novel—the degree to which it addresses itself to contemporary post - World - War - II America. I don't so much mean the dozens of small foreshadowings of what the country will be like when the war is over. What I mean is the altered relationship between men and women that the novel comes directly to grips with. Oddly enough, one of Jones's major concerns throughout the story is with oral sex, particularly as it is practiced by men on women. Most of the women whom the soldiers party with in Luxor are defined in terms of their interest in it. Sgt. Strange's wife, Linda Sue, leaves him for another man because of his lack of interest in it, and when Strange finally tries it with another woman and discovers that he likes it, he wonders endlessly if he is "a pervert" for doing so. The characters perform it repeatedly and graphically. They even wonder at its illegality in 36 of the 48 states, and seriously analyze the reasons why this should be.

Now of course this is supposed to be funny, and to some de-gree it is. It is also supposed to reflect s reality of Army life, and, as far as I know, it does that, too. But it plays far too prominent s role in the narrative to be justifled on grounds of humor and realism alone. At least the way Jones has handled it, what it reflects more than anything is an acknowledgment of women's liberation from the role of passive sexual partner. Several times in the novel it is stated as a fact that only by oral stimulation can a woman truly experience orgasm. And this in turn—the way Jones has handled it—constitutes a direct threat to the old Army way of seeing things. It challenges the view of women as chattei that one old West Point officer expresses when he says to Bobby Prell: "Ws men, We men like to have our good times. But we don't like to pay up for it. We are supposed to look after women, and take care of them. Protect them. They need that from us. Our whole civilization is based on that." And it threatens the concomitant view that the only true source of love and companionship is to be found in male

So as much as Jones's heroes are haunted by nightmares of soldiers who have died because of them, they are terrified by the loss of a male-bouded society. And the whistle of the novel's title is not just a call for help in a hospital ward; it is also a cry for help in general. So much for James Jones being "stuck" back in World War II. Indeed one wonders what he would have made of it all had he lived to write s tetralogy.

NO GAME TODAY—Some of the Milwaukee Brewers look out over their flooded field in Sun City, Ariz. The state has been declared a disaster area after heavy rains and floods.

Hisle Has High Goals Set for Him

By Dave Anderson

SUN CITY, Ariz, March 6 (NYT).—Now that he's in the big money, Larry Hisle is a big name in baseball. As a free agent, the 28-year-old centerfielder signed a $3.1-million six-year contract with the Milwaukee Brewers after having led the American League with 119 runs batted in for the Minnesota Twins last season.

He has come a long way from Portsmouth, Ohio, where his family once was on welfare. But he's not flashing his money. He's not that type. He might lead both leagues in gentleness of manner, in softness of voice. He lets his bat do his bragging.

When the Brewers opened spring training, he was working out here a week before he was supposed to. He arrived with his wife. Sheils, and their 6-year-old son, Larry jr., and they rented a small apartment that is as modest as he is. "We're investing some of the money in bonds, nothing risky," he said. "I'm not going to change my lifestyle." His lifestyle also involves a phone call every so often to 15-year-old Mike Weinbrecht, the son of his high school baseball coach. Mike Weinbrecht is in a wheelchair with muscular

'T've known Mike every since I started playing for his father," Hisle was saying. "I used to spend a lot of time in their house. Hisfather, Harry Weinbrecht, knew how to give advice."

An Old Question

Hisle's mention of Mike Weinbrecht developed from one of baseball's tritest questions - had he thought about setting any statistical goals for himself as the Brewers' new cleanup hitter?

"That's something I do every year," he had said. "I do it for a young friend of mine who has muscular dystrophy. To try to keep us closer together, I call him to see how I'm doing with the goals I set. I did pretty well last year. I wanted a 301 average.

and 23 home runs. I always include runs scored because to me runs batted in and runs scored

With the Twins last season, Hisle batted 302 with 119 runs batted in, 95 runs scored and 28

"The only one I was way off on was stolen bases," he said, laughing. "I wanted 47 hut I only got 23. But for this year I turned it around. I asked Mike to set my goals for me. I'm going to have to go some to get Weinbrecht had written on it. "Mike wants me to hit .306, drive in 123 runs, score 101 runs, hit 31 homers and steal 36 bases. I saw him a couple of weeks ago when I stopped in Portsmouth to see my folks before coming down here. I'll probably see him in Milwaukee this season. His father's sister lives there. He always comes to see me once a year. He usually comes up to Cleveland from Portsmouth, but this year I imagine he'il come to Milwaukee and maybe Cleveland, too."

As with most other people in hasetall, Weinbrecht thought Hisle would sign with the Texas Rangers rather than the Milwaukee Brewers. . . . "Texas made me an offer," Hisle recalled "but their president, Brad Corbett, wanted me to sign within a day or two. The money was roughly the same as the Brewers' offer, but I didn't want to be rushed."

Went for Zisk

"When they signed Zisk, they didn't need me," he said. "But by then I was impressed by the way the Brewers' organization was treating me. I talked to Sal

Indiana Only Surprise Choice For NCAA Basketball Field

WASHINGTON, March 6 (WP). -Indiana's selection was the only surprise when the NCAA announced yesterday the 11 at-large teams to complete its 22-team championship tournament field.

Upsets in conference tournsments and the NCAA's new seeding system resulted in some blockhusting possibilities in the early rounds of the tournament. For instance

· A possible showdown between No. 1-ranked Kentucky and the defending champion, No. 3-ranked Marquette, in the round of 16 in

Play Starts Soon

First-round play begins Saturday at eight sites. Sixteen teams will edvance from there to the four regional tournaments the following week, the East at Provi-dence, R.I., the Midwest at Lawrence, Kan, the Mideast at Dayton, Ohio, and the West at Albuquerque, N.M.

One survivor from each of the regionals will go to St. Louis for the national semifinals and final March 25 and 27.

In addition to Indiana, the stlarge teams picked by the six-man selection committee were Marquette, Syracuse, Providence, Florida State, North Carolina, Arkansas, Kansas, DePaul, Notre Dame and Utah

Five other teams-St. John's, Rhode Island, St. Bonaventure, La Salle and Pullerton Statewere automatic qualifiers because they won their conference titles. but were seeded as at-large teams because their regional placements had not been predetermined.

Indiana got its bid over Detroit. Georgetown and Illinois State, all with better records. But the Hoosiers won nine in a row at the end of the season and the selection committee chaired by Wayne Duke, who is also the Big Ten commissioner, felt they deserved the selection based on the strength of their schedule.

The at-large teams are seeded on the basis of their competitive records this season. So Marquette was seeded No 1 at large in its region (Mideast). In the draw, the No. 1 at-large team is bracketed to play the second-seeded con-ference team in the round of 16. As it turns out this year, the second-seeded conference team in the Mideast is No. 1-ranked Kentucky, setting up that possible early showdown.

gins to argue with them. "Hey, take it easy," says Derek the peacemaker.

Still, his reputation will not leave him. In the locker room the other day he took a swig of cough syrup from a bottle and a player told the trainer, "It's 10:30 in the morning and the guy has to drink a beer? And he

MEMPHIS, March 6.-Jimmy Connors beat Tim Gullikson, 7-6, 6-3, yesterday to win his fourth U.S. national indoor tennis cham-pionship. That staked him to a share of the lead going into yesterday's 36-hole finish. He quickly took the lead alone when the coleader, David Graham, ran into difficulties, then held off the field in the more than 9 hours he spent on the course.

"I'm not sure what you're driving at Heartongue."

"The Constitution provides that every person accused of a crime is entitled to sell his story to a magazine, a newspaper, a hardcover book company and a peperback publisher. The value of his story is based on what he did not tell the grand jury or the FBI. If you reveal the facts in this case, the TV bidding on Lottle'e book could be seriously damaged."

The U.K.'s 20th-Century Colonizers

By William Tuchy

I ONDON-While the sim has long since set on most of the British Empire, the British manny, after a parallel period of decline, is experiencing a new vogueparticularly overseas.

Although more traditional nannies like Mary Poppins can still be seen pushing their pracos through London's Hyde Park, the younger names increasingly are seeking employment abroath

"We have more requests for namies coming from overseas than we can handle." said Chells Davis, managing director of Albemanic Nannies, which symples them for a dozen countries.

"The British manny is becoming Britain's new 20th-century colonizer abroad," she said. There are an estimated 5,000 Buildish es working oversens and 10,000 in

Mrs. Davis said that most of the young namies she places would prefer to go to the United States but employment there is limited because of the stiff regulations on work pennits. "So we find that many of our girls go to the Middle East or to Letin America," Mrs. Davis said. "The pay is good. The taxes are low. You usually travel first class and live in a lumprious home."

To what does Mrs. Davis attribute the emend for British nannies?

"Around the world." she said. "the British still have a reputation for knowing how to bring up children with a com-bination of discipline, good humor and sound common sense. In addition, wellto-do parents want their children to speak good English."

During the harsh British winter, the promise of sumpy flar-off places has an undeniable allure, too. As the tempersture in London dipped below freezing, Mrs. Davis produced a letter from a citent in Venezuela discussing the new name. "She has a beautiful room and enjoys the tropical climate every weekend on our boat, Mrs. Davis said.

Another namy, currently working in an Arabian royal household, has her own air-conditioned, three-roomed visia on the grounds of the palace, a swimming pool for her and her two charges, plus an airconditioned Cadillac.

She wrote to Mrs. Davis: "I work hard but everyone is kind, considerate and courteous. The big problem will be when the children grow up and I have to leave. Landing back in England will be quite a

The British institution of the nauny flowered during the Victorian and Edwardian eras. Then it became a tradition among British families of position to have a woman in the household-usually a widow or spinster-to look after the upbringing of children.

The word itself is thought to come from the childhood nickname for a grandmother: "Nana" or "Grampy." Nannies have been hoth widely praised and heartily damned. A good namy was instrumental in providing the love and care for children that parents themselves sometimes were not able to give. Winston Churchill erected a memorial plaque to his nanny, Elizabeth Everest. But some namies were domineering and cruel and have been mentioned frequently in modern British Merature.

In his book, "The Rise and Fall of the British Nanny," Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy quotes of Lord George Curson, viceroy of India at the turn of the century, on his mony, one Miss Paraman:

"In her savage moments she was a bru-tal and vindictive tyrant; and I have often thought since that she must have been insane. She persecuted and beat us in the most cruel way and established over us a system of terrorism so complete that not one of us ever mustered up the courage to walk upstairs to tell our father or

The names often accompanied British amilies assigned to colonial administrative duties, and local potentates also began to acquire mannies for their children. The King of Slam had Nanny Anna.

At one time, there were an estimated 2 million nameles in Britain and the olonies. But after World War II, the cost of maintaining large households was probibitively expensive, and the use of servants. ng nannies, began to decline. And as tastes changed namedes ceased to be

The traditional position of the namy was also eroded by the arrival of the cheap au pair girl, or mother's help, from the continental countries of Europe.

But in recent years, there has been a new interest in nannies, particularly those who are graduates of Britain's half-dozen nursery training schools.

These schools offer young girls a twoyear course in child care and related duties. and upon completion a nanny must pass an examination given by the National Nursery Examination Board to become certified.

Mrs. Davis prefers not to send a new namey abroad until she has worked at least year in Britain after graduation from "Going to a foreign country," she said, "and living among strangers can be an upheavel. So we want a girl who has lived away from home for at least a year before considering her for service abroad." After a screening process, a prospective nanny is selected for the family, under s year's contract with the option to renew. If the namy decides to leave prematurely, she must pay her way back. But if the damily is dissettabled, they pay the ticket back to England.

What specifically is a foreign family looking for in a British name? "Well, recently a Saudi Arabian told us why he wanted a Brillish namey," Mrs. Davis said. 'He wrote: 'On the whole the British are a politic race. The girls are upright, honest, dignified, have an apcistion of the little things and above all they have a sense of humon."

Over the years, the Albemarle agency has supplied nameles for seven royal house-holds, for European bankers, Latin American businesemen and for an American general recently assigned to the Pentagon.
One widowed German client wrote her: I want a namy to look after my children. And if she does well, I would then like to merry her."

The pay for working in the Middle East ranges upwerd to about $200 a week, plus, of course, room and board. "It is hard work," Mrs. Davis said, "because there is not much for a girl out there to do with her time off."

Many of the newer young nannies plan to get married and have children them-

"It's a bit like the sixine stewardess of generation ago," said Mrs. Davis. "The girls get two years of schooling, then go out as nannies for four or five years. Then they may well get married, and they tend to make good mothers because of their

Nelson Rockefeller Makes It Official

Nelson Rockefeller, who would seem to have been out of politics for some time now, made it official definite and all that sort of thing in New York Monday. Ahead? A brand-new career--as an art publisher. "I just decided it was time to get out of politics," he said. "I don't even see politi-cians anymore." Rockefeller, who turns 70 in July, said he will devote himself to the diffusion of fine art, first through books and later through high-quality reproductions. All the works will come from his private collections, and he said he will sign the reproductions to prove their prove-nance. He offered no specific reason for retiring from public life, except to say that when you're vice-president, you lose touch with everything.

It had to come. The first American Crossword Puzzle Tournament was run off over the weekend, in Stamford, Conn. The two-day competition involved solving, within a time limit, five crosswords ranging from "hard to very hard to forget it," as one competitor put it. Winner was Nancy Schuster, of Manhattan, who won a trophy and $125 for her efforts. Second was Eleanor Cassidy, of Fairfield, Conn. ($50), and third was Murray Leavitt, of Pound Ridge, N.Y. ($25).

The friendly folks in Mosco who put out the official Soviet Encyclopedia have cut the late Nikita Khrushchev down to a mere 34-line item and put a heavy knock on him in the bargain. The former Soviet leader, said the text, "showed subjec-tivism and religious" in his activity which seems to mean that he epiroached problems "idealistically, without regard to real conditions and scientific principles." The previous edition of the encyclopedia, published in 1957, gave him an article four times as long as well as a fullpage picture. In the new edition, his photo is about the size of a postage stamp.

To add to the long list of royal woes, Prince Michael of Kent, 35, the 16th in line to the British throne, has consulted the Archhishop of Canterbury about the difficulties he is facing over his plans to marry German-born Marie-Christine Troubridge. Here is a resume of their prob-

Mrs. Troubridge could join the Church of England but church law forbids the marriage of divorcees in the church.
